INDIANA UNIVERSITY ART MUSEUM (cover)

This year marks the 75th anniversary of the Indiana University Art Museum. Founded in 1941, through the vision of esteemed former president of IU, Herman B Wells, the museum existed in a variety of locations before its current I.M. Pei-designed building was completed in 1982. The museum is regularly listed as one of the top university art museums in the country, with an encyclopedic collection that has grown to more than 45,000 objects. The museum will be marking its anniversary with a variety of special exhibitions, installations, and events throughout 2016. The museum will also be launch a new online guide to the collections featuring over 750 of its most famous works this spring, and a new, more comprehensive collections guidebook towards the end of 2016.

THOMAS HART BENTON MURALS

The year that Thomas Hart Benton produced his monumental Indiana Murals for Chicago's "Century of Progress" World's Exposition, 1933, was a time of great change and uncertainty. These murals with their progressive theme of Hoosier (and by proxy American) hard work and perseverance were meant to entertain, educate and empower. With great foresight, the murals eventually found a home at IU thanks to then President, Herman B. Wells.

- Michael McRobbie

T. C. STEELE HISTORIC SITE

The noted Hoosier impressionist painter, Theodore Clement Steele (1847-1926), became the first major artist to make a home in Brown County, Indiana. The picturesque landscape (and Steele's prominence) attracted other artists, establishing the Art Colony of the Midwest.

Over 50 paintings on display in the Large Studio and House of the Singing Winds, provide a glimpse of southern Indiana as it appeared more than a century ago.

"It has seemed to me that the greatest of all arts is the art of living"

— T. C. Steele

NASHVILLE, IN

Nashville boasts a thriving tourist industry based upon the original works of resident artists and upon the area's natural beauty. The largest state park, Brown County State Park is nearby. Art, antique, and specialty shops, as well as galleries, restaurants, and entertainment venues, make up quaint, downtown Nashville with a population less than 1000.

COLUMBUS, IN

National Geographic Traveler describes the city as "authentic, unique, and unspoiled." As a city known for its architecture, there are a high number of notable public buildings and sculptures in the Columbus area, designed by such influential individuals as Eero Saarinen, I.M. Pei, Robert Venturi, Cesar Pelli, and Richard Meier. This has led to Columbus earning the nickname "Athens of the Prairie."
